

We are focusing on Non-Verbal Reasoning this week (yes, again!) and although it can sometimes be a high-risk strategy, there are times when it is well worth checking the options first as there are quite often opportunities to easily spot the two options that are the most similar and the answer will most often be one of those. Obviously in the above example, the answer will be either C or D.